

IFRS 9 requires that missing or incomplete data in the input features of credit risk models be handled using consistent, explainable techniques.

Data imputation should not bias risk predictions. For numeric variables, median imputation is preferred over mean, unless justified.

Dropping rows due to missing values is discouraged unless the proportion is minimal (<5%).